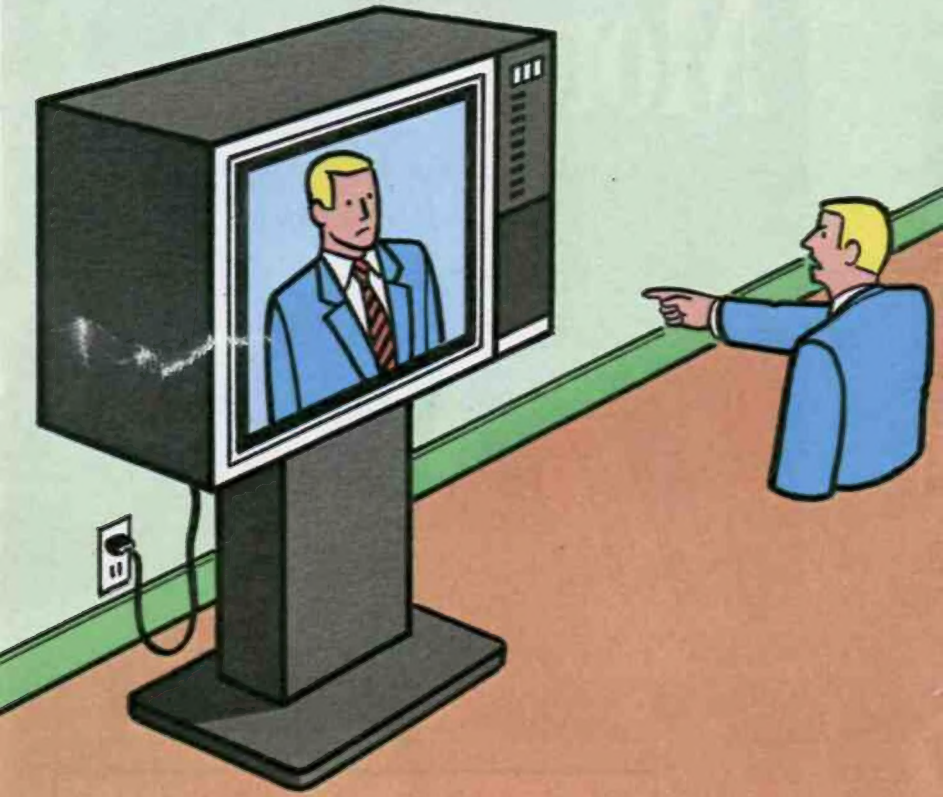
It's Time TV Started Covering–and Criticizing–Itself



G. BILLOUT

By David Shaw

Last year, Ted Koppel introduced one of ABC's Viewpoint programs—a periodic examination of the performance of the news media, especially television—by saying, "We are . . . acknowledging not necessarily that we have done wrong but that many of you in our audience are firmly convinced that we have done wrong."

". . . not necessarily that we have done wrong"? Well now, I thought as I watched this program, if Ted Koppel—surely one of the best, most independent and fair-minded men in television—couldn't bring himself to say, up front and without any equivocation, that television news programs have done wrong, have made mistakes, it's no wonder almost everyone else in television is positively terrified even to discuss such a possibility.

But why is television so afraid to admit its mistakes? Why is there no regularly scheduled, prime-time self-examination on television? Television is the most pervasive and the most powerful medium in the history of mankind. It brings the entire range of human experience into virtually every living room in the country every day. But television tells viewers very little about itself and how it does its job—about its procedures, its priorities, its policies, its decision-making process, its mistakes. Wouldn't viewers like to know—don't they have a right to know—how recent network mergers have affected news budgets and news coverage? And why the networks decided to have their evening-news anchors conduct more live interviews and even go into the field more often themselves? And what role advertisers play in prime-time programming? And why, say, Lou Grant was canceled? And how the demands of modern technology and daily deadlines influence news-gathering techniques and the quality of news coverage?

These are all interesting questions—questions that television would eagerly pursue if they involved other institutions. But they involve television, so television largely ignores them. Television reports on, analyzes and criticizes the President, Congress, the courts, big business, labor, the church, every major institution in society except one: television—and, by extension, the rest of the media, print and electronic. Why this determined neglect?

Before I try to answer that question, I should enter two disclaimers. First, I don't mean to single out Ted Koppel as a primary transgressor in television's failure to cover and to criticize itself. Quite the contrary. Koppel seems more willing to publicly acknowledge the media's shortcomings than are most of his colleagues, and as a viewer and (once) as a guest on Viewpoint, I have come to admire Koppel greatly. Indeed, on the very show I cited above, he offered several sentences of press criticism in his concluding remarks. (Sample: "Some of us [in the media] sometimes behave outrageously.") But in the context of that program—indeed, the context of television overall—I thought that concession was too little, too late. Second disclaimer: having been taught at a very early age that people who live in grass houses shouldn't throw manure, I have to admit that my own profession—the newspaper business—hasn't exactly covered itself with glory in the field of self-examination. Most newspapers write about themselves only once a year—when the Pulitzer Prizes are announced. Or when there's a scandal of such immense proportions that it can't be ignored (as when Janet Cooke of The Washington Post wrote about an 8-year-old heroin addict and won a Pulitzer Prize for her effort—and was then found to have made up the whole story). Until recently, most papers didn't even like to publish corrections of obvious factual errors—and if they did publish corrections, they generally published them in the back of the paper, among the ads for trusses and athlete's-foot powder.

But newspapers are improving—however slowly and slightly—in their coverage of themselves and the rest of the media. Virtually every newspaper now → publishes daily television reviews, and some cover the business and ethics of television programming as well. About 30 newspapers now also have ombudsmen—men and women who write regular columns criticizing (and responding to readers' complaints about) their own newspapers. A few other papers have reporters assigned full-time to cover the newspaper business.

My own newspaper, the Los Angeles Times, has two such reporters, and when our stories are published, they usually begin at the top of the front page and usually run at considerable length. I've personally examined subjects ranging from the media's over-reliance on unnamed sources to the making of editorial policy to the dangers of chain-newspaper ownership—as well as the flaws in political polls and best-seller lists, the influence of restaurant and film critics and the problems of the reporter-as-plagiarist and the reporter-as-impostor. Moreover, many newspapers now publish corrections daily, in a prominent and regular place in the paper. But I see no such improvement—no such growing maturity—in television.

Ron Hendren was a television critic for NBC's Today show for 14 months in 1978-79—until howls of outrage from the network affiliates grew so loud that Hendren disappeared from Today. In Los Angeles, the local ABC affiliate had a media critic in 1979-80. No more. Last year, Peter Boyer talked about the media on the CBS Morning News; when Boyer left to go to work for The New York Times, no one replaced him. Public television's Inside Story examined a wide variety of media issues in the early 1980s. But it, too, is no more. Even Viewpoint didn't show up between August 1985 and April 1986, despite ABC's original, mid-1981 announcement that it would appear four times a year—and despite a series of provocative programs on such important subjects as invasion of privacy, terrorism, national security, violence, medical reporting and coverage of the White House, foreign news, political campaigns and the TWA hostage crisis.

Media critic Ron Powers does appear alongside Charles Kuralt on CBS News Sunday Morning these days, and he is generally a skilled and thoughtful analyst (although I was shocked a couple of years ago when he offered a singularly one-sided report of a dispute between the executive editor of The New York Times and a Times reporter). Jeff Greenfield also looks at the media, both on Viewpoint and during his appearances on ABC's World News Saturday. Greenfield, too, is capable of first-class media criticism, and—like Powers—he sometimes criticizes his own network, on the air. But since Greenfield left CBS for ABC, he's been doing more politics and becoming less a media critic—and, let's face it, neither the news programs nor Viewpoint appears in prime time. The "letters" segment of 60 Minutes and the rare media segments on the other network "magazine" programs don't do the job television should be doing either.

All of which brings us back to the question: why doesn't television—network and local—offer more self-examination, preferably in prime time? About the only programs that even came close to prime-time examination of the press in recent years were two CBS documentaries in 1982 and two NBC documentaries, one last year and the other scheduled for last month.

Hodding Carter, who was the chief correspondent for Inside Story, thinks television seldom broadcasts serious programs that critically examine the media because "television has always felt itself to be held in contempt and disdain by the print press, so it's disinclined to add to its misery by criticizing itself . . . and even more disinclined to criticize the print press and . . . risk aggravating the beast that's already at its throat."

Carter's right. But there's more to it than that. Some of television's reluctance to indulge in self-examination and self-criticism may stem from the media-bashing that Vice President Spiro Agnew and others pursued so menacingly in the late 1960s and early 1970s. Television executives were afraid then that the Federal Communications Commission might revoke the licenses of some stations to punish them for their coverage of Watergate and other less-than-saintly activities of the Nixon Administration; understandably, no one in television wanted to help the FCC make its case by broadcasting any admission that television had, indeed, done wrong—ever. But Nixon and Agnew are, mercifully, long gone, and the FCC, like most regulatory agencies under President Reagan, doesn't seem likely to interfere with any profit-making enterprise; television should act accordingly—and responsibly—and both acknowledge its mistakes and analyze its actions, on the air.

Why doesn't it? Are television executives (again, understandably) worried about the increasing number of libel suits filed against the media these days? Are they as concerned about giving lawyers for litigious plaintiffs a club to beat them over the head with as they were about giving a similar club to Nixon's FCC? Gen. William Westmoreland wielded this club during his libel suit over the network's 1982 documentary "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception"; CBS asked Burton Benjamin, a senior executive producer, to conduct an internal investigation of the documentary, and when the resultant "Benjamin Report" cited 11 "principal flaws" in the broadcast, Westmoreland cited the report as "proof" of the network's culpability.

Television should both acknowledge its mistakes and analyze its actions, on the air.

Mistakes of both commission and omission are inevitable in the media, print and electronic. Given the volume of material a newspaper or magazine or radio or television station processes every day, it's a bloody miracle there aren't more mistakes—of all kinds. Doesn't it make sense to admit that—and to explain how and why those mistakes happen? Of course it does. But one thing I've learned in almost 12 years of writing about the press is that most newspaper publishers and editors, like most people in most fields, don't like to admit their mistakes. Worse, many are patronizing, paranoid and arrogant; they seem to feel that what they and their employees do is either too complex for the reader to understand or none of the reader's damn business.

I suspect that most television executives feel the same way. They also know better than anyone else just how much there is to criticize in television—everything from the mindlessness of most prime-time entertainment to the superficiality of most news shows to the craven worship of the Great God Nielsen. In fact, the ratings game itself—and the commercial-cum-money engine it drives—is a major reason television doesn't have much self-examination. It's significant that while most good newspapers put important stories on their front pages, even if many readers might object to all this "bad news" and might prefer a blend of human-interest stories and lurid, titillating tales from the police blotter, television fills its front page—prime time—with pap designed to appeal to the lowest common denominator . . . with the emphasis on common.

Big audience means big rating means big bucks, and civic and moral obligations be damned—or consigned to the late-night or Sunday morning programming ghettos. Thus, if a prime-time program of media criticism wouldn't draw a big audience (and it probably wouldn't), then television isn't about to do it. Oh sure, the people who run television say there isn't enough time to cover all the news and to examine television and the rest of the press, too. And they say media criticism and self-examination wouldn't be visual enough to make good television.

Baloney.

Technically, television can do virtually anything it really wants to do—and do it in an entertaining fashion. It's about time television started covering—and criticizing—television and the rest of the media. Regularly. Prominently. Responsibly. END

Linda Dano Is:
☐ An Actress
☐ An Author
☐ A Couturière
☐ An Antiques Dealer

For this one-woman whirlwind, the answer is: all of the above

By Mary Alice Kellogg

It's only appropriate that Felicia Gallant's first scene today in NBC's Another World would concern a shopping spree. Dressed to kill in Bay City in electric-blue silk and black leather, the dashing romance novelist is obviously a character to be reckoned with—even without the trademark shoulder pads that would make William "The Refrigerator" Perry look petite. For the last four years, clothes-conscious Felicia has brought elegance with theatrical flair to daytime TV and restored cachet to the act of shopping. Her wedding last winter to an adventurous local fisherman (only in daytime can such matches work) brought the master of flash, Liberace, to do a guest turn. Felicia is Liberace's favorite character. And Linda Dano, who plays her with flamboyant, full-out zest, is his favorite actress.

If viewers study Felicia for her wardrobe and wit—she makes Joan Collins seem, well . . . slightly dull by comparison—then entrepreneurs could do well to study Linda Dano for her work ethic. Not only has Dano created one of the more popular daytime characters, but she also creates businesses at a rate that would make a workaholic blanch. For starters, there's Strictly Personal, a fashion-consulting firm Dano started five years ago, working then, as now, from a cramped home-closet-turned-office. Currently, Strictly Personal numbers among its customers Another World, All My Children, As the World Turns and more than 150 private clients. To fill their spare time, she and husband Frank Attardi, an advertising executive, also are producing for possible future syndication a daily half-hour beauty and fashion show, The Best of You, Starring Linda Dano.

Don't forget the antiques store in Connecticut, where Dano is a backer and buyer—17th- and 18th-century American antiques are a passion. Two years ago she also co-authored a romance novel as Felicia Gallant and went on a 20-city tour to promote it. Then there's a stint playing wheeler-dealer Margot Delefont in "Sidney Sheldon's Rage of Angels: The Story Continues," scheduled for fall telecast on NBC. Of course, Dano also selected the accessories for her character.

For others this might be a recipe for burnout, but for Dano, who at 43 has enough energy to light a city during a blackout, it's second nature. "If I stopped all the businesses, I could just be an Italian princess at home, but I just can't do that," she quips. On the set, Dano, who has a photographic memory, knows her lines cold and acts as a jolly focal point for cast and crew, cracking jokes and inspiring in her co-workers a personal loyalty nothing short of fierce.

The entrepreneurial fever struck Dano relatively recently. She majored in art, fashion and interior design in college, which led to a stint teaching modeling and then modeling itself. From there, it was a short step to commercials and then to acting. But five years ago, after she completed a role on One Life to Life (where she still has many private clients), the actor's dry spell set in.

"For 11 months I couldn't get arrested as an actress," she says, green eyes flashing and shoulder pads hunching forward for emphasis. "It was devastating. I said then that I would never let that happen again, to be beholden to a network, a producer, a show. So I started a second business, which now makes as much for me as my acting"—about $300,000 a year for each. "It's good to have a second job. It keeps you out of trouble."

But a third and fourth job? Perhaps it's genetic. Dano's father "was the only man who, during the Depression, held not one but three jobs at once. I guess I'm convinced deep down it's all going to end tomorrow." The fashion-consulting business was an outgrowth of Dano's own experience and flair, but also came at the end of a crisis period: she had been married and divorced, experienced two disappointing stints on daytime dramas and one failed prime-time series, The Montefuscos. With the offer to play Felicia, a character she could sink her fantasy and fashion teeth into, and a second, happy marriage, things began to come together.

While Dano's friends express concern that she might be doing too much, they also admit she seems to thrive on it. Dano herself confesses she can't relax—vacations in Italy are spent cramming in visits to as many art galleries, fashion houses and cultural sights as time allows and, unlike Felicia, Dano has never been to a health spa—but she isn't worried. When things get to be too much, she knows she's capable of calling a halt.

Today, Felicia's next big scene on the AW set is an aerobics class, and Dano is decked out in a yellow terry exercise outfit (with shoulder pads, natch) that causes the crew to dub her "Big Bird." Throughout the taping, she cracks jokes with the actors and, when Felicia grumbles about exercise, it is also Dano talking. "Look at her," she says of a lithe extra in a skimpy leotard. "Don't you hate her? I'm one of those people who was born with cellulite." Scene over, it's back to the phones to arrange some outfits for All My Children. Then she'll consult her crammed appointment book, which contains endless lists of things to do for the day, the week.

This day, however, has not ended. After a limousine ride from AW's Brooklyn studios to her apartment in Manhattan, Dano will stop by three stores to pick up fresh mozzarella, sausages and peppers for a home-cooked meal for her husband. After that, she will stop by a jewelry wholesaler to plunk down $8000 for accessories for various clients. Then she and her husband will take the one-hour ride to their weekend retreat, an 18th-century farmhouse on 8½ acres in Connecticut. They have lovingly restored the house as an antique-filled island of calm, but even there Dano says she "paints walls to relax."

Linda Dano may also be one of the few people extant who can strip woodwork with flair. Friend and client Robin Strasser, who plays Dorian Lord on One Life to Live, recalls being invited to the country for a weekend. "I drove up to the house and there was Linda—in overalls, no makeup, with a baggy sweatshirt on. But—honest to God—under the sweatshirt she was wearing shoulder pads." Dano's explanation was simple: she wanted to minimize her hips, even in overalls.

Felicia Gallant would be terribly, terribly pleased. END

Will the U.S. vs. Soviet Matchup Make Them a TV Smash?

Ted Turner's dream of outdoing the Olympics begins this week, featuring a long-delayed showdown between the superpowers

By Howard Polskin

Cable's WTBS and many local stations are scheduled to begin telecasting the Goodwill Games on Saturday, July 5. See "Sports Calendar" for times and channels in your area, and the listings section for July 5 for a detailed event-by-event preview of the coverage.

The Americans bristled at the Soviets who sat across the table. For three days, they had felt the Soviets were cheating them. Now it had come to this: 10 men glaring silently at one another for five long minutes in a Moscow office building across from Lenin Stadium. Finally, Robert Wussler, the chief American negotiator, shot a piercing glance at Anatoly Pogrebnoy, his Soviet opposite number.

"You, sir, are a goddamned liar!" he declared. "Now get your boss so we can resolve this. If not, we're going to get on a plane and leave."

The Soviet's face flushed with anger. Without saying a word, he and his associates immediately left. Wussler's colleagues sat there slack-jawed. They thought that any moment the KGB would burst in and they'd be arrested.

Five minutes later, a woman served them coffee, a courtesy not extended to them earlier. Twenty minutes later, they were told lunch would be served. At 2 that afternoon, Pogrebnoy's bosses arrived. At 3, the deal was completed.

What was being negotiated was not a political treaty or a disarmament pact but a television deal between WTBS, a cable-TV network (known in the trade as a Superstation), and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (known in the trade as a Superpower). What Superstation and Superpower created was the Goodwill Games, a 16-day televised international sports competition that features many of the world's top amateur athletes and that is planned to be held every four years. It's very close in concept to that other two-week international sports extravaganza, the Olympics. Too close, in fact, for some very interested parties.

"The United States Olympic Committee threw a fit when we announced the games," recalls Wussler, Turner Broadcasting System's executive vice-president. "They attempted to say the games were illegal." And what was Wussler's reaction? "The executive director and the staff of the USOC are a bunch of Neanderthals," he says.

Ted Turner, Wussler's boss, also jumped into the fray last February when, in an interview with USA Today, he called the last two Olympics "shams" and predicted that the Goodwill Games would be bigger than the Olympics. In a statement issued to the press, the USOC termed Turner's remarks "ludicrous." Thus, before the starters' guns had even been fired, shots were whizzing through the air.

For viewers, the bottom line will be whether the on-the-field competition can match the off-the-field conflict. What's supposed to make this event so special—indeed, the very reason for its existence—is the U.S.-Soviet matchups that, because of boycotts, were missing from the last two Summer Olympics.

During the summer of 1984, Ted Turner was watching the Olympics without the Russian dressing and he wasn't pleased. It was like watching Luke Skywalker without Darth Vader. He walked into Bob Wussler's office in Atlanta and announced in his good ol' boy Southern twang, "Hey, Wussler, we gotta get control of the Olympics. This boycott business has got to stop. I want you to go to Moscow, and have you and the Russians buy the world TV rights to the 1988 Summer Games."

Wussler paused before speaking. "Ted, that's a tall order," he replied diplomatically.

"I know, but think about it." →

Three days later, Wussler, having thought, was on an airplane for Moscow.

When he returned to Atlanta, he told Turner the Soviets didn't have the cash to buy the rights to the 1988 Games but they were eager to create their own international athletics competition together with the Turner organization.

"Oh boy," said Turner. "We can start our own games. That's even better. Can we do winter games in the summer? Can we import snow?"

Don't expect snow. But viewers will see 3200 athletes from 52 countries competing in 18 sports, comprising 129 hours of television (50 live, 79 tape delayed). Impressive numbers. But more impressive are the big-name U.S. amateurs who are expected to compete: track-and-field star Carl Lewis, hurdler Edwin Moses and more than 600 other American athletes.

The spirit of international competition and the free trip to Moscow were surely factors in their decision to go. But more importantly, in the spirit of capitalism, Turner offered several hundred thousand dollars above and beyond normal expense money to the 18 U.S. amateur athletic federations invited to send athletes to Moscow—a practice that does not exist for Olympic participation. For some top names, it is said, there's added inducement. "A big star can ask for $20,000 and someone will pay it," observes one track-and-field expert.

The amount that each federation receives depends on the television drawing power of each sport. Track-and-field has the highest marquee value. Therefore its federation, The Athletics Congress, received more than a million dollars. Altogether, nearly $5.4 million was distributed, roughly a sixth of Turner's $35-million tab for staging the games.

But not every U.S. federation that has been invited to Moscow is going to send its top people. United States Swimming, Inc., the national governing body for swimmers, beached its best athletes so they could compete more effectively at the World Championships in Madrid later in the summer. The decision created waves.

"We're making a mistake not sending our top swimming team to Moscow," says John Leonard, executive director of the American Swimming Coaches Association. While Leonard doubts that the USOC pressured United States Swimming, Bob Wussler thinks otherwise.

"The USOC got to USS," he says flatly. "That's one the USOC won. So the score's 17 to 1. If U.S. swimmers get their butts handed to them in Moscow, it's not our fault."

"We're making a mistake not sending our top swimming team to Moscow."

—John Leonard, executive director of the American Swimming Coaches Association

One problem Wussler won't have to worry about is the possible absence of the premier Iron Curtain athletes. With the USSR as a co-organizer of the games, the best athletes from Soviet-bloc countries are sure to fall into line with nary a nyet. Athletes from the free world, however, are exercising more of their own free will. The reason probably boils down to money. Most European runners agree to compete only for thousands of dollars, and neither TBS Inc. nor the Soviets are ready to hand over that kind of cash—at least to non-Americans. (The Athletics Congress is paying each of its athletes $3000 to go to Moscow.)

Such great English middle-distance runners as 800-meter world-record holder Sebastian Coe, who reportedly is paid at least $10,000 every time he runs, can expect nothing. That may be why many athletes from the British Amateur Athletic Board, including Coe, Steve Jones (former world-record holder in the marathon) and Steve Ovett will probably miss the games. But Turner did snare two top-notch attractions: Steve Cram (world-record holder in the mile) and middle-distance sensation Zola Budd.

Getting Cram and Budd was gravy, but the meat and potatoes of the Goodwill Games is still the Soviet-American competition. Like their military counterparts, both teams (along with the East Germans) are world-dominating superpowers. Olympic boycotts notwithstanding, the two have met on the playing field recently. In the 1985 International Amateur Athletic Federation World Cup track-and-field meet, the U.S. and Soviet men's squads came in first and second respectively; the East German women ranked first overall while the Soviets finished second and Americans fifth.

Pending national trials and late scratches, some exciting matchups are expected. In the pole vault, Soviet Sergei Bubka, the world-record holder, will probably face strong competition from the U.S.'s Joe Dial and France's Pierre Quinon, the 1984 Olympic gold-medal winner. (Another U.S. vaulting ace, Billy Olson, is not expected to attend.) Carl Lewis should be tested by Poland's Marian Woronin in the 100-meter dash and by Cuba's Jaime Jefferson in the long jump. West Germany's Harald Schmid, the last man to beat the U.S.'s Edwin Moses in the 400-meter hurdles way back in 1977, should once again face Moses in the same event.

In gymnastics, the Americans will be hard pressed to topple the Soviets. Look for U.S. Olympic gold-medal winners Tim Daggett and Scott Johnson, plus 16-year-old Sabrina Mar, to mount some of the biggest challenges to the Soviets' Yelena Shoushounova, who's been called the Russian Retton, and Yuri Korolev, the 1985 men's all-around champion.

Other possible matchups to watch for include U.S. boxing heavyweight Mike Bent's renewed battle with the Soviets' Aleksandr Yagubkin; Olympic superheavyweight gold-medal winner Bruce Baumgartner's wrestling showdown against the Soviets' David Gobdjisvili; and the duel between centers David Robinson of Navy and 7-foot-1 Arvidis Sibonis, the best hoopster on the strong Soviet squad, in the men's basketball world championships televised from Spain as part of the TBS package.

Of greater concern to TBS Inc. than the outcome of Soviet-American athletic conflict is lagging advertising sales. Advertisers have been cool to this new, untested product in the TV-sports marketplace. Predicts Richard Kostyra, executive vice-president of the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, "Financially, [the games] will probably lose money. For viewers, they should be a success."

But if the event is well received by the American TV audience, it would seem to pose something of a threat to the Olympics. While the U.S. and the USSR may be able to coexist on the same planet, the world may not be big enough for two quadrennial international athletic extravaganzas. A basic law of economics says that increasing the supply decreases the demand. If that's true, won't the value of the Olympics surely be diminished?

Not so, sniffs Michael Eskridge, executive vice-president of Olympic coverage for NBC, which will broadcast the 1988 Summer Games. "The Goodwill Games won't have anywhere near the stature of the Olympics," he declares.

"It's not even a point for us to worry about," says Mike Moran, a spokesman for the USOC. "The Goodwill Games are light-years away from the Olympics."

Even the heads of the U.S. amateur sports federations, who gush about the big bucks and big exposure, deny that the Goodwill Games can pierce the aura that surrounds the Olympics. And while they may treat the Goodwill Games as a good friend, they're essentially married to the Olympics, bound by a quality that the Goodwill Games just can't duplicate for now: deep-rooted tradition.

"Sure, I'm tickled pink about the money from the Goodwill Games," says Mike Jacki, executive director of the U.S. Gymnastics Federation. "But the Olympics is unique in the world of sports."

"There'll be nothing wrong with the Goodwill Games," adds one of the most powerful figures in track-and-field. "The quality of certain sports will be quite high. Yet events are special because of history. And right now this is a TV event of less history than Celebrity Bowling." END

Nuclear Falling Out

Along with many others in Eastern Europe, the cast and crew of ABC's upcoming miniseries War and Remembrance have been feeling the aftereffects of the USSR's Chernobyl nuclear-plant accident. As the production moved on to location filming in Yugoslavia, ABC hired scientists from the International Atomic Energy Agency to test for possible radioactive contamination. They found it safe, and filming continued.

However, at the production's next location—the Auschwitz death camp in Poland—problems did arise. Even though the scientists said that it, too, was safe, 40 of the show's 75-member technical crew refused to work there. The rest of the company, however—including stars Jane Seymour (left) and Sir John Gielgud—voted to go on to Poland, and local technicians were hired to fill in.

The A-Plus Team

Watch for NBC's The A-Team to begin its new season this fall with swollen ranks. According to co-executive producer John Ashley, as many as three new characters will join up: a Government official who acts as a liaison to the team when it goes legit; a new team member who specializes in unusual weapons; and at least one new female character. What's certain is that the new woman won't be Tia Carrere (right), who appeared in the season finale. A possible factor in that decision: Carrere's "legal problems" involving her contract with ABC's General Hospital ("Grapevine," April 5). Says Ashley: "We have no desire to get into a conflict with ABC."

Something Different

As attorney Garrett Boydston on ABC's Dynasty and The Colbys, Ken Howard (above) has had to deal with tycoons like Jason Colby and Blake Carrington. As the host of an upcoming syndicated series called Dream Girl, U.S.A., Howard has to deal with—prospective beauty queens. That's right, the show is sort of a weekly beauty pageant, except "the girls are going to be hipper and sexier and funnier—and much more show-business-oriented," says Howard. "There's something almost morally pretentious about most beauty pageants, but with this one, the girls are out there to sell, sell, sell—like any performer. They're not representatives of Texas or Mississippi or America. They're supposed to be the girl you would want to star in your next movie or TV series or musical."

BMOC

"Terms of Enrollment," this week's Cinemax Comedy Experiment (July 11), is a tongue-in-cheek guide to higher education. Its star is Charlie Barnett (below, left), the one-time street comic who plays street-smart Noogie Lamont on NBC's Miami Vice. Its point is how to succeed at college without doing anything at all. In that regard, Barnett feels he's the perfect host: he has played plenty of colleges with his stand-up act, but never attended one. "I never even finished junior high," he admits. "I never went to school. I went to reform school."

Role Reversal

"I used to play a lot of drunks," says William Hickey, but no more. Ever since winning a 1985 Academy Award nomination as the godfather in "Prizzi's Honor," Hickey's being offered "a lot of powerful men." Case in point: his upcoming turn as a multimillionaire businessman in the NBC TV-movie "Stranded" and, more bizarre, his role in an episode of Tales from the Dark Side next season. That one casts Hickey (in character, left) as the ringmaster of an eerie carnival that features such "attractions" as a werewolf and vampire. Only in Hollywood.

J. Schnepf

Self-Portrait

"Half a Lifetime" (July 20, HBO) takes place at a weekly poker game involving four longtime buddies. Gary Busey (below) plays Bart, a high-school football star turned overweight machinist. "I feel like I'm telling you about myself when I tell you about Bart," Busey says. "I don't know whether I inhabit the character, the character inhabits me-or it's a direct exchange—like a beautiful volley in tennis." Busey does note that he no longer shares Bart's girth. "I weighed 215 pounds for the part [down from the 240 he once carried], and I've lost 60 pounds, almost down to my 'Buddy Holly Story' size. If they want me heavy for a role again, they can put pads on me."

No More Mr. Nice Guy?

George Clooney (below), who plays the adorable George Burnett on NBC's The Facts of Life, is spending the show's summer break doing a play in Chicago. Clooney's character is portrayed as a drug-dealing male hustler—an obvious departure for Clooney, who's nevertheless having the time of his life with the role. "There are no Standards and Practices to worry about, and no censors to answer to," he says. "There is nothing nice about this boy. But believe it or not, I'm the most likable character in the play."

High Concept ↑

"When you're dealing with television," says Alex Karras, turning philosophical for a moment, "you need a real hook." For his upcoming ABC TV-movie "The Fun Bunch," Karras (above) has what he considers a real hook. "It's almost like the Three Stooges in the '80s," he says, describing the film he's currently shooting for next season. In it, Bubba Smith, Dick Butkus and Karras himself—all playing themselves—are lured off to a remote locale, along with a number of other past and present NFL greats, on the pretense of honoring their veteran coach. What happens instead is a kind of ultimate old-timers' game, matching the pros against a diabolical adversary, his computer and his team of bad guys. Says Karras: "It's like Fantasy Island"—at least in places. At the beginning, there's a lavish party scene with "refreshments and women. It's ABC, so we have to put some women in." Incidentally, Karras is co-producing the movie. And, yes, he already has a sequel in mind. That's television, too.

A Clowning Achievement

In 1990, Bozo the Clown will celebrate his 50th birthday. On the assumption that it's never too early to start planning, Larry Harmon (the original TV Bozo) is trying to assemble as many of the 185 former local-TV Bozos as he can for a reunion in New York City's Madison Square Garden—and a possible TV special. Although Harmon suspects that "a few have gone to that great circus in the sky," he knows of at least one former Bozo who's still going strong on the small screen: weatherman Willard Scott (left) of NBC's Today show. He played Bozo some years back in Washington, D.C. Another TV big shot, whom Harmon claims to have helped along in the business, is producer (and former network chief) Fred Silverman. "I gave him a job as floor manager in Chicago," says Harmon, honking his own nose.

Tell 'Em Neil Sent You

For the last 12 years on NBC's Days of Our Lives, Joe Gallison has played Dr. Neil Curtis, a former compulsive gambler and heavy drinker who is, nevertheless, a nice guy to have for a friend. Neil has helped many a fellow character get on with his or her life. Off-camera, Gallison just finished working in a play in California. His latest venture, however, is one Dr. Curtis would probably approve of. Along with his wife, Melisa, Gallison has opened a bar in Studio City, Cal., a place where actors can go to unwind and complain about their directors. The name of the place, appropriately enough, is re$iduals.

Let's Hear It for . . . ↑

Maggie Shelby and Roger Coleridge of ABC's Ryan's Hope: the couple everyone loves to hate (played by Ron Hale and Cali Timmins, above) are getting married next week. And they won't be slinking off to a justice of the peace to do it, either. Theirs will be a civilized affair, with all the soap trimmings—including the possibility that it won't come off at all, if Max Dubujak (Daniel Pilon) has any say in the matter.

Poster Boy, Take Two →

The last time we checked in with CBS's The Young and the Restless, Jack Abbott (played by Terry Lester, right) was on trial for the attempted murder of his father's ex-wife Jill. Whether he did it or not, there's no doubt that the Emmy-nominated Lester remains one of daytime's leading pinups. About a year ago, we reported that Lester was the subject of a waterproof, laminated poster that fans could hang in their showers. The poster in question—which showed the actor clad in nothing more than the briefest black bikini briefs—was such a hit that a second edition has been released. This time, the briefs are red—but not as brief. According to insiders, some retailers found the first poster a little too revealing.

Cloudy Future?

A TV college basketball season without the street wit of Al McGuire (above) may be hard to imagine, but it has suddenly become a distinct possibility. Although McGuire still has a year to go on his current NBC contract, he himself speculates that he may not be coming back. "I left the business world, I left the coaching world, and now it might be time to leave the suite-and-limo world," he says. "I'm not closing any doors, but I want to know [about my NBC future] before my final year. I'm not going into my last year without knowing what's going on." All three networks will carry college games next year, but McGuire says he hasn't spoken with ABC or CBS. Negotiations to date with NBC have been informal. "I don't like executive offices," McGuire says. "Everyone is usually looking at their watches and burping." . . . Former worldclass sprinter—and current Chicago Bears wideout—Willie Gault (below) has been conducting a running battle with the International Amateur Athletic Federation (the world governing body of track and field) over whether he can resume his track career—despite being a pro-football player. The IAAF recently issued an informal ruling that would seem to make Gault eligible for the 1988 Olympics, but he wasn't exactly overjoyed by it. "Their rulings are never consistent," argues Gault, who will provide track-and-field commentary for the inaugural Goodwill Games (July 5-20, WTBS). "They've kept me on an emotional roller coaster. It's too much of a strain to train all year, run every day—and then have them change their minds again." As for the Goodwill Games, Gault says he would like to see politics kept out of them somehow. "I hope that the people running Goodwill will, for once, put athletes ahead of politics. Leave the games to the athletes."

News Update

South Africa Getting More Network Time

South Africa's restrictions on coverage of news events there are resulting in more network air time being devoted to the apartheid issue, according to news analysts and industry executives. "The sanctions appear to be having the opposite effect of what the South African government intended," said Gloria Johnson, vice-president of DWJ Associates, a media consulting firm. While South Africa usually draws at least one per cent of network air time, the percentage increased to more than 20 per cent during the week of the 10th anniversary of the Soweto uprising, according to the DWJ analysis. The week was marked by South Africa's decision to ban all live satellite interviews and by an exclusive 15-minute taped interview by Peter Jennings with Bishop Desmond Tutu.

ABC News president Roone Arledge told reporters: "What we are trying to do is protest as much as possible." He described South Africa's censorship as "insidious and more abhorrent than other kinds of censorship, in that journalists are being asked to censor themselves."

CNN spokesperson Judi Borza agreed that the press restrictions had increased the volume of South African stories, explaining that the censorship becomes a story in itself. "After correspondent Peter Sharp delivered a package on the live interview ban," she said, "he also turned in a story on how other media in South Africa were coping with the situation."

According to the DWJ analysis, ABC's World News Tonight led the three network evening newscasts in amount of time devoted to South Africa that week with 38.2 per cent. CBS used 24.5 per cent of its time and NBC 21.1 per cent. —Ann Salisbury

Fox to Program Two Nights in Prime Time

In addition to The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers, which makes its debut this fall, the new Fox Broadcasting "fourth network" will schedule five hours in prime time (two dramas, six comedies) starting next March. The network plans to telecast from 8 to 10 P.M. (ET) on Saturdays and from 7 to 10 on Sundays. Its schedule will include a half-hour comedy from Family Ties producer Ruth Bennett called Duet and a one-hour crime drama from A-Team producer Stephen J. Cannell. Sources say Fox is closing in on a deal to bring Star Trek back as a series, and the company has already announced that it will telecast a series version of the film "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." The chances that Fox will pick up the canceled All Is For-

Knots Within Knots

One storyline left dangling at season's end for CBS's Knots Landing was the mysterious background of Paige Matheson (Nicollette Sheridan), the illegitimate daughter of Mack MacKenzie (Kevin Dobson). Next season, Paige's past will be illuminated in flashbacks to the 1960s, in which Doug Savant will play the young Mack and Sheridan her own socialite mother. And the youthful Greg Sumner may look familiar: he'll be played by Josh Devane, whose dad, William, portrays the Sumner of the '80s.

Suite Inspirations

There will be more room at the inn—and a few new semi-regulars—on ABC's Hotel next fall. "We will still use weekly guests, but not so much," says an insider. And some stars will stick around past the usual one-episode checkout time, with Michelle Phillips (as the concierge) already booked for five weeks and Efrem Zimbalist Jr. (the Cabot family representative) for seven. Meanwhile, that passionate love affair between St. Gregory co-owner Peter McDermott (James Brolin) and new manager Christine Francis (Connie Sellecca) will be presented as a "novelized story." Says the insider: "Each week their story and romance will grow, rather than the show just sticking to its anthology style."

Chiller

Sherlock Holmes alive—in 1986? Elementary, if you believe the plot of CBS's upcoming TV-movie/pilot "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," yet uncast. It seems that back in the old days, the evil Moriarty tricked Holmes into ingesting bubonic plague bacteria—whereupon Holmes had his companion Dr. Watson freeze and hide him in Watson's country home until a cure could be found. Cut to the present: Watson's American great-granddaughter discovers the detective and thaws him out. Says producer-writer Robert Shayne, "Holmes is one of the smartest men in the world, so he would adapt to modern life readily." Let's see how he adapts to punk rock—and Moriarty's great-grandson, who'll show up if the pilot becomes a series.

Presidential Type

Wilford Brimley, who'll star this fall in NBC's new prime-time series Our House, has a really bully part upcoming: he'll play Theodore Roosevelt in a yet unsold TV-movie tentatively titled "Roughrider" and based on an unpublished tale by Mark Twain. Why Brimley as Roosevelt? Says executive producer Ronald M. Cohen of the bespectacled, mustachioed actor: "He is almost the spitting image."

Grapecheers

To ABC's World News Tonight for devoting more than half its June 18 broadcast to an extended interview with Nobel prize-winning South African Bishop Desmond Tutu, despite the possibility of adverse reactions from his nation's government, which had imposed repressive censorship on journalists. An additional Cheer to WNT anchor Peter Jennings for keeping his questions and interruptions to a minimum and letting Tutu's eloquence speak for itself.

ARMS AND THE MAN

Miami Vice's Don Johnson, in designer clothes, is one of the sexiest men on television, but MacGyver's Richard Dean Anderson, in sweat shirt and corduroys, is the sexiest ["Locked Out, He Threw a Bench Through a Plate-Glass Window," May 31].

Jo Maniscalco
New York City

I am a little bothered by the gratuitous crack made by Richard Dean Anderson in your article: that he, being of a nonviolent philosophy, would not "get along real well" with the NRA. I am a National Rifle Association member, and I have never noticed that the NRA promoted violence. What it does promote is continued defense of our constitutionally guaranteed right to keep and bear arms, whether for the defense of our homes or our Nation; safety in firearm education and the shooting sports; and hunter education programs that encourage the wise use of our national resources. What is somewhat ironic is that this slap at the NRA on the violence issue comes from a devoted fan of ice hockey—which some contend is a blood sport—who has thrown a bench through a plate-glass window after locking himself out of his house.

BLOCK THAT PUTT!

Mark Russell missed the one change that would do the most to improve TV's golf coverage ["Blasting TV Golf Out of the Sand Trap of Boredom," June 7]: the participants should be allowed to play defense. What could be more exciting than having a golfer attempt to block the tee off? At the very least, allow a player to recite humorous limericks while his opponent is putting.

Joseph Sekelsky
Colfax, Wis.

Show me, Mr. Russell, another sport where competitors penalize themselves, or another sport that is relatively drug-free and immune to ridiculous contract problems. "Exciting" sports such as baseball, football and basketball cannot make that claim.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST

I beg to differ with the woman who wrote to protest the airing of the TV-movie "The Deliberate Stranger," claiming that it glorified serial killer Ted Bundy ["Letters," June 14]. At the time of the program, I was a graduate student living in an all-girls dorm. The effect that Mark Harmon's brilliant portrayal of Bundy had on those of us who watched the movie was profound. It taught us again what mother told us when we were young: don't talk to strangers—however handsome, witty and charming they may be. On behalf of many women, I thank Mark Harmon and NBC for reinforcing mom's lessons.

Lorraine C. Slomski-Fahey

BIRTH OF A TROUBLED NATION

I find Jay Cocks' choice of D.W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" as one of 20 "must have" videocassettes appalling ["10 Double Features You've Never Thought of—and Should," June 7]. This film, which glorified the Ku Klux Klan and misrepresented blacks as mindless, seems astonishing for its racism, even considering its 1915 issuance. Cocks ignored the diatribe against blacks that occurred in this film; he should have ignored the whole work as well.

Marc Cobb
Culver City, Cal.

May I suggest the double feature of "First Blood" and "Johnny Got His Gun." Sylvester Stallone's celebration of guns, guts and glory provides perfect contrast for Dalton Trumbo's compassion for humanity and hatred of combat.

Want a sure cure for TV's typical July doldrums? Mix together the Wimbledon Tennis finals, local-station coverage of the Goodwill Games, a timely chat with Chief Justice Warren Burger and the festive conclusion to ABC's Liberty Weekend. Then just sit back and watch.

NBC's Wimbledon Tennis coverage wraps up this weekend with the women's singles finals on Saturday and the men's on Sunday. Mr. Burger talks with Bill Moyers on Wednesday's CBS News Special. For details on the sports and performing galas of Liberty Weekend, see the Close-up in Saturday's program pages.

Two PBS reruns this week are also well worth your attention. River Journeys follows British journalist William Shawcross on a 1983 trek up the Mekong, from Ben Tre in Vietnam through Vietnamese-occupied Cambodia and on up to the Golden Triangle, where the river forms the boundaries between Thailand, Burma and Laos. Given Shawcross's evidence, it is neither easy nor enjoyable for a Westerner to travel in lands occupied by Indochinese Marxists. One suspects that it's no easier to live there, either.

For pure dumb fun (with a great sound track), there's Rockin' & Rollin' with Phil Spector. Chronologically, songwriter and record producer Phil Spector fills the void between Elvis Presley and the Beatles. He produced everyone from Ray Peterson to John Lennon and the Ramones, and had his greatest success with the Ronettes, the Crystals, Darlene Love and the Righteous Brothers. Quite a few of those folks, along with L.A. disc jockey Rodney Bingenheimer (a champion of Spector's and an acquired taste in his own right), turn up in this British-made documentary to talk about Spector behind his back. But then, they have no other choice: the reclusive Spector refused to be interviewed.

In some areas programs may not be seen on the days indicated.

CABLE

Sat.-Fri., WTBS	Goodwill Games
Sat., SHO	WrestleMania 2

Never underestimate Ted Turner, the sportsman. As a yachtsman, he once successfully defended the America's Cup; as the owner of the Atlanta Hawks, he's given us Dominique Wilkins and Spud Webb; and as the owner of the Atlanta Braves (a team he once managed for a day), he's given us Dale Murphy. This week—in conjunction with fellow sportsmen in the Soviet Union—he's giving us his very own pseudo-Olympics, the Goodwill Games. Details on the coverage (and there's certainly plenty of it—55 hours on WTBS this week alone) can be found in Sports Calendar and Saturday's Close-up.

Back in April, Los Angeles, Chicago and New York played host to one of the most breathlessly anticipated sporting events of this decade—WrestleMania 2. Showtime has the highlights. In the pièce de résistance, top wrestlers take on the toughest men in the NFL in a 20-man "Over the Top Rope" Battle Royal that need only be seen to be believed. If I were you, I wouldn't underestimate Andre the Giant in this one.

BROADCAST

Sat., CBS	The Scarlet Pimpernel
Sun., NBC	The Fantastic World of D.C. Collins
Sun., CBS	First Steps
Mon., NBC	The Execution
Fri., CBS	Running Out

Some top-notch repeats are on hand this network-movie week in its offering of six second-run movies.

As luck would have it, of course, two of the toppers start out in the same time slot. For the best of derring-do and romantic adventure, there's 1982's The Scarlet Pimpernel, its three-hour teleplay by William Bast based on two Baroness Orczy novels and directed by Clive Donner. As any schoolboy used to know, that "demmed elusive Pimpernel" is Sir Percy Blakeney, a gallant Englishman who poses as a fop but leads daring forays into France to rescue "aristos" from the guillotine during the Revolution. Anthony Andrews heads a fine cast in this rich and classy production.

In competition with the first half of this delight is the week's one theatrical, James Ivory's 1979 The Europeans, to be shown on some PBS stations as an American Playhouse presentation. This remarkably literate and lovely adaptation of the 1878 Henry James novel does more than justice not only to the 1850 New England setting but also to the Jamesian view of the triumph of American innocence over European sophistication. Lee Remick and Robin Ellis head the good cast.

In a slot of its own, 1985's The Execution offers first-class suspenseful melodrama in its story of five women, friends and concentration-camp survivors, who recognize a local restaurateur as the Nazi doctor who tortured and violated them in their youth, and plot his demise. Loretta Swit, Jessica Walter, Barbara Barrie, Sandy Dennis and Valerie Harper are the plotters, Rip Torn their prospective victim.

There is a choice to be made between two other TV-movies. The first is 1985's First Steps, a "based on fact" story of the accomplishment of Dr. Jerrold Petrofsky, the bioengineer whose work with computer electrodes enabled a young paraplegic to walk 10 steps to get her college diploma. Judd Hirsch is the scientist, Amy Steel the attractive young woman. Up against it is 1984's The Fantastic World of D.C. Collins, a pleasantly juvenile story, with Gary Coleman a diplomat's son involved with Walter Mitty-like daydreams and real-life spies.

Least of the repeats is 1983's Running Out, a soggy story, with Deborah Raffin a runaway mom who is reunited with her daughter 12 years later. The cast is far better than the material.

In some areas broadcast movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

CABLE

A&E	Caddie
HBO	Wildrose

The quality newcomers to cable are concerned with women making it on their own. 1976's Caddie, an Australian film, is the biography of a suburban housewife who supported herself and her children by working as a barmaid in Sydney during the '20s and the Depression, with Helen Morse a valiant heroine in a period and place brought to glowing life. 1984's Wildrose is the story of a woman miner in the Mesabi Range in Minnesota, with Lisa Eichhorn the protagonist who escapes from marriage to an alcoholic but is dichotomous about her independence.

The women's and men's finals of the 100th All-England Tennis Championships, taped in the London suburb of Wimbledon.

Saturday: After the women's final, don't be surprised if Martina Navratilova accepts the winner's trophy. Yes, she can be beaten, as Chris Evert Lloyd has demonstrated many times (including this year's French Open). And yes, upstarts can come out of nowhere to bring down the mighty (see below). But there is little reason to think that this is the year the top woman player in the world will succumb at Wimbledon. Navratilova, who has never lost a Wimbledon final, is going for a record seventh win—and a record five in a row.

Sunday: Last year Boris Becker, at 17, became the youngest player ever—and the first nonseed—to win at Wimbledon. The West German Wunderkind came from behind in six matches to win tennis's most prestigious title, beating another surprise finalist, Kevin Curren, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4. Throughout the tournament, Becker demonstrated nerves of steel and the aggressive court demeanor of which champions are made. Ivan Lendl is the men's top seed, but is still winless at Wimbledon.

Dick Enberg, Bud Collins, JoAnne Russell, Stan Smith and Bill Macatee report.

GOODWILL GAMES

SAT.-FRI. 20 35 TBS

Athletes from over 50 countries gather for the inaugural event in Moscow, running from July 5 through 20. [See the Sports Calendar for times and the listings for further details.]

Sports to be covered this week include . . .

Track and Field: The U.S., USSR, East Germany, West Germany and Cuba should lead the pack. Slated to participate: Carl Lewis (U.S.), long jump and 100m dash; Edwin Moses (U.S.), 400m hurdles; Valerie Brisco-Hooks (U.S.) and world record-holder Marita Koch (East Germany), 200 and 400m sprints; Willie Banks (U.S.), the triple jump; and pole vaulters Sergei Bubka (USSR), Pierre Quinon (France; 1984 Olympic gold medalist) and Joe Dial (U.S.).

Basketball: The men's World Championships, being held concurrently in Spain, are included in the Goodwill Games coverage. The Americans are looking for a championship matchup with the USSR, but Spain, Yugoslavia and West Germany each have enough talent to pull off an upset. Among the Americans: David Robinson (Navy), Kenny Smith (North Carolina) and Tom Hammonds (Georgia Tech).

Women's basketball is part of the Goodwill Games and here, too, the favorites are the U.S. and the USSR (with 7-2 Iuliana Semenova). On the U.S. team: Olympic gold medalists Ann Donovan, Teresa Edwards and Cheryl Miller.

Volleyball: The men's final is likely to match the U.S. and the USSR. The Americans return six of 11 '84 Olympic gold medalists, are reigning World Cup champs and beat the Russians in seven of nine 1985 meetings.

The U.S. women have no one from the Olympic silver-medal squad, but have been progressing quickly. In the absence of Cuba and China ('84 Olympic champs), the Soviets are favored.

Swimming: The World Championships next month have cut into the field, men and women alike. U.S. teams are notably weakened. Top teams: the USSR and East Germany.

Cycling: East Germany has the top men's team, but the U.S. is sending Olympic sprint champion Mark Gorski and runner-up Nelson Vails. The U.S. women's squad is the world's best, but some top cyclists will be missing.

Water Polo: Best bets are the USSR, Hungary, West Germany.

Rhythmic Gymnastics: The Soviets and the world champion Bulgarians are the powers here.

Diving: Olympic medalists Michelle Mitchell and Wendy Wyland head a strong U.S. women's team; its toughest foes are China and the USSR. The world's best male diver, Greg Louganis, is not expected, but American men should be competitive with the Soviets and Chinese.

Modern Pentathlon: Soviet men are expected to vie with Hungary and Italy. The top women's teams are from Poland and the USSR.

[Note: Athletes named are expected to compete; last-minute changes are possible.]

ANNOUNCERS

Overall host Bob Neal is joined by Nick Charles and Mary Anne Loughlin. Event reporters include . . .

Track and Field: Kevin Christopher, Curt Gowdy, Charlie Neal, Leandra Reilly, Willie Gault, Craig Masback, Bill Rodgers and Dr. LeRoy Walker.

Basketball: Rick Barry, Mike Fratello, Bob Knight, Ann Meyers and Bill Russell.

Volleyball: Don Chevrier, Leandra Reilly, Ann Meyers and Mike O'Hara.

Swimming: John Naber, Tracy Caulkins, Rowdy Gaines, Nancy Hogshead and Steve Lundquist.

Cycling: Kevin Christopher and Jonathan Boyer.

Water Polo: John Naber and Chris Dorst.

THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL

Anthony Andrews does very well by a part that's been played on film by Dustin Farnum (1917), Leslie Howard (1935) and David Niven (1950).

That role, "The Scarlet Pimpernel" (based on the character created by Baroness Orczy in 1905), is actually two roles. First, there's Sir Percy Blakeney, a foppish British baronet who lives high, dresses to the nines and hobnobs with the Prince of Wales. But Percy is also—secretly—an elusive, roguish master of disguise who rescues French nobles from the Reign of Terror's guillotine, leaving behind his mark: the seal of a tiny red flower.

In this 1982 TV-movie, the Pimpernel's derring-do builds to a scheme to save the imprisoned young dauphin. And it unfolds amid intrigue and strategems that envelop Percy's wife (Jane Seymour)—who doesn't know his double identity.

Directed by Richard Donner ("Superman"). Chauvelin: Ian McKellen. Armand: Malcolm Jamieson. DeBatz: James Villiers. Louise: Eleanor David. Robespierre: Richard Morant. Andrew: Dominic Jeffcott. De Tournay: Dennis Lill. (Repeat; 3 hrs.)

LIBERTY WEEKEND (CC)

SAT. 8 PM;
SUN. 7 PM 7 11 13

Liberty Weekend—impresario David Wolper's commemoration of the Statue of Liberty's centennial—heads into the weekend . . .

SATURDAY

The main event takes place on the Great Lawn of Central Park in New York City, where Kirk Douglas and Angela Lansbury host a Classical Music Salute to Liberty featuring the New York Philharmonic, conducted by Zubin Mehta. The scheduled fare includes works by Beethoven, Bizet, Haydn, Verdi, Sarasate and Puccini, plus some patriotic songs, spirituals and pop tunes.

Slated to perform with the Philharmonic are tenor Placido Domingo, mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne, cellist Yo-Yo Ma, baritone Sherrill Milnes, soprano Leona Mitchell, violinist Itzhak Perlman, the New York Choral Artists and the U.S. Army and Marine Bands. (2 hrs.)

SUNDAY

The festivities shift to the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., for two celebrations . . .

☐ Sports Salute to the Statue is a 60-minute gala telecast from the Brendan Byrne Arena, opening with a parade of athletic greats that includes Hank Aaron, Muhammad Ali, Wilt Chamberlain, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Billie Jean King, Rafer Johnson, Nancy Lopez, Joe Namath, Bobby Orr and Willie Shoemaker.

Next, there's a figure-skating exhibition spotlighting Peggy Fleming, Scott Hamilton, Dorothy Hamill, and Randy Gardner and Tai Babilonia. Then the salute swings into gymnastics, with performances by Mary Lou Retton, Bart Connor, Peter Vidmar, Dan Hayden, Julianne McNamara and Kristie Phillips. There are also boxing and cheerleading exhibitions, and finally there's a tug of war between the NFL's Giants and Jets.

☐ Closing Ceremonies, a three-hour windup from nearby Giants Stadium, begin with John Williams' "Liberty Fanfare," played by 120 trumpeters. Then, before celebrities appear, there's a high-stepping number by 200 dancers and a 1000-member drill team; the presentation of colors by a military color guard; and the singing of the National Anthem by a 1000-voice chorus.

Scheduled next are the celebrities—not to mention 200 square dancers, 200 Elvis Presley impersonators, 300 fiddlers and banjo players, 300 tap dancers, 300 Jazzercise dancers and a 500-piece marching band. There are also dramatic readings by Charlton Heston and Cicely Tyson, and remarks by Vice President George Bush. Winding up the extravaganza is an ending that Wolper would describe only as a "surprise."

"You Are So Beautiful" . . . . . Nelson, Rogers

VIEWERS' GUIDE TO KEY U.S./SOVIET MATCH-UPS

Men's Basketball – USA vs USSR

It's the clash everyone has been waiting for. America's brightest young collegiate stars take on the veteran Soviet powerhouse, the reigning world champions. Look for the game in the semifinal or final round of the World Basketball Championship, presented from Spain as part of the Goodwill Games telecast schedule.

Boxing – Michael Bent USA vs Aleksandr Yagubkin USSR

One of America's most promising young boxers, heavyweight Michael Bent, is out to prove himself against the best of the Soviets. Bent won the U.S. Nationals in 1984 and 1986, lost a narrow decision to Yagubkin in the 1985 World Cup, but came back to defeat Yagubkin in the 1986 World Championships. Whatever the outcome, Goodwill Games viewers will witness the emergence of a heavyweight star.

Track and Field – USA vs USSR

America's top Track and Field stars, Carl Lewis, Edwin Moses, Jackie Joyner, Joe Dial and more will compete against the top stars of the Soviet Union, including Sergei Bubka, Igor Paklin, and Tamara Bykova.

Wrestling –
Bruce Baumgartner USA vs David Gobedjisvili USSR

The world's two toughest heavyweights continue their private battle for the top. Baumgartner, the 1984 Olympic Gold Medalist, was upset by Gobedjisvili at the 1985 World Championship. But the American fought back to win the 1986 World Cup. The Goodwill Games promises an exciting tie-breaker.

Men's Volleyball – USA vs USSR

For years, the Soviets have fielded the world's best volleyball team. But in the past three years, the U.S. has become a serious challenger. In 1985, the U.S. won 8 of the 10 matches between the two teams. In front of the Soviet crowd, with Soviet prestige on the line, this could be one of the most emotional battles of the GAMES.

MASK

Cher gives a strong performance in Peter Bogdanovich's factual 1985 drama about the courageous Rocky Dennis.

In some ways Rocky (played by Eric Stoltz) is a normal teen-ager with normal interests, like baseball cards, rock music, girls and touring Europe on a motorcycle. But there's no denying that Rocky is different. He was born with a rare disease that causes calcium to build up in his skull at an abnormal rate, making his head disproportionately large and mask-like. And he has been raised differently from most of the kids at the California school where he's an honor student. Rocky's "family" consists of his feisty and fiercely loving mother, Rusty (Cher), and the motorcycle-gang members who are her friends and lovers.

Pained more by his mother's drug use than by his frequent headaches, Rocky decides to get away for the summer by working at a camp for the blind. There, for the first time, he isn't plagued by strangers' stares.

Rated PG-13 for strong language and adult themes. Songs by Bob Seger. Gar: Sam Elliott. Diana: Laura Dern. Dozer: Dennis Burkley. Evelyn: Estelle Getty. Abe: Richard Dysart. Ben: Lawrence Monoson. (2 hrs.)

given seem reduced because the producers of All Is Forgiven are busy with another project. They are working on The Tortellis, a Cheers spinoff slated to be a midseason backup for NBC.

Rumors persist that former Mary Tyler Moore Show producer Jim Brooks is working on a Fox project. And other producers all over Hollywood are scrambling to bring ideas to Fox, which so far is generally giving orders for 13 shows without requiring a pilot to be made. The other networks often order only six episodes of a new series. —Richard Turner

Arbitron Plans New Ratings System

Arbitron (Nielsen's chief rival in the ratings business) and Selling Areas-Marketing Inc. are planning to introduce nationally a new system for measuring TV viewing during the 1988-89 season. The system, called ScanAmerica, is designed to allow advertisers to compare exposure to commercials with what viewers actually buy. It will consist of meters installed in 5000 households nationwide. The meters will include a device to record which family members are watching TV at any given time. There will also be a separate handheld scanner, which families will use to scan all merchandise purchased containing electronic brand and price information—similar to the scanners now in use for price tabulation in some supermarkets.

Families will be paid from $20 to $30 a month for participating. A pilot project in Denver has been collecting data from 200 households since last November and will be expanded to 600 households by April.

The metering boxes have built-in prompting systems to remind viewers to record who is present. As a result, the response level in test homes has been about 90 per cent, according to William McKenna, president of ScanAmerica. "This is a uniquely powerful audience-targeting method," McKenna said. —A.S.

Valerie Harper, Sandy Dennis and Loretta Swit

THE EXECUTION

A tidy murder story that derives motivation from the Holocaust.

The principals are five friends, all survivors of the same Nazi concentration camp, living in 1970 Los Angeles: Marysia (Loretta Swit), Hannah (Valerie Harper), Gertrude (Jessica Walter), Sophie (Barbara Barrie) and Elsa (Sandy Dennis). They discover that someone else from the death camp may also be alive and well and living in Los Angeles: their Nazi torturer, Wilhelm Gehbert (Rip Torn).

Marysia seduces Gehbert to verify his identity, and four of them make a pact to kill him (Hannah, a lawyer, declines). The executioner is chosen by secret lot, the deed is done—but a man is charged with the homicide. It is left to Hannah to propose an intriguing way to clear the accused while preserving their own freedom, and it is left to a series of plot twists—and a surprising climax—to resolve this 1985 TV-movie, directed by Paul Wendkos.

CBS NEWS SPECIAL
8 PM 5 10

THE BURGER YEARS

An interview with Chief Justice Warren Burger, who on June 17 announced that he was retiring from the Supreme Court after 17 years of service.

Bill Moyers talked with the Chief Justice that afternoon and again the following day. The conversations, Moyers observes, were a "roller-coaster ride . . . going here and there and back."

The Chief Justice explained his decision to step down to devote his energies to the chairmanship of the committee overseeing the Constitution's 200th anniversary in 1987: "I would not have traded 17 years to do this job but I'd gladly trade two to do it. I see the Bicentennial of the Constitution as a civics lesson for us all."

The most moving moment, according to Moyers, occurs when Burger describes what it was like for him to order President Nixon—who had appointed him—to hand over Watergate-related tapes to the special prosecutor. The Chief Justice also reflects on the importance of separating personal views from Constitutional duties on subjects like abortion and the death penalty, and the threat to the Republic posed by crime. WOLF TRAP PRESENTS
THE KIROV: SWAN LAKE
8:30 PM 9

A performance by the Kirov Ballet of Leningrad, one of the world's premiere dance companies, which produced Nijinsky and Nureyev, Balanchine and Baryshnikov. It was taped earlier this month during the troupe's first North American tour since 1964, a byproduct of last year's Geneva Summit.

The Kirov style is marked by a refined classical purity so it's most fitting that the troupe performs "Swan Lake." This ballet about love and betrayal involving a handsome prince, a Swan Queen, an evil magician and a wily seductress epitomizes the romantic tradition with its Petipa-Ivanov choreography and music by Tchaikovsky. As one critic recently wrote: "There could hardly be a more dazzling and revelatory experience than seeing the Kirov's 'Swan Lake': for American dance lovers, it's a splinter from the true cross."

For this performance, either Galina Mezentseva or Olga Chenchikova will dance the dual role of the Swan Queen and the seductress, and Constantin Zaklinsky or Marat Daukaev the part of the prince. (2 hrs., 30 min.)

Reporters at the Cape in the 1950s recording the dawn of a new era

The first stages of America's space program are recalled via home movies, newsreels and the reminiscences of producer-director Nancy Yasecko, whose father was a rocket engineer during the '50s and '60s at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The Cape was chosen as a test site because of its isolation, and those who worked there in the early days received hardship pay. When the first major launch occurred, residents of nearby Cocoa Beach had no idea of what was going on, but as the space race accelerated, Cocoa Beach became something of a boom town. Cement-block houses and motels quickly sprang up. Successful launches were a cause for celebration, and even the flops were memorable for lighting up the sky.

Yasecko and her contemporaries also talk about significant events in their lives and in the space program, including reactions to Soviet achievements; the Mercury program; the Cuban Missile Crisis; the fire aboard the Apollo 1 capsule that claimed the lives of three astronauts; the first lunar landing; the Vietnam War; and the economic problems in the area following the end of the Apollo program. When he heard them arguing about who would kill him, Shea Farrell knew he was in trouble

Besides acting on Hotel, he spent weeks on the streets with the homeless learning how tough their lives can be

Barry King

By Bill Davidson

There is a certain amount of restlessness on the set of ABC's Hotel—especially among the "puppies," which is how the young actors and actresses who play running, but secondary, parts refer to themselves. The unsettled attitude does not sit well with director Bruce Bilson, who finally has to roar, "Now listen, everybody, in the last half hour, this set has fallen apart. Now I want all of you to act as if you're doing this for a living."

One of the puppies—the handsome, 180-pound, all-American hunk Shea Farrell, who plays hotel guest-relations man Mark Danning—definitely is not one of the objects of director Bilson's wrath. Farrell is sitting quietly in a corner, studying and restudying his brief lines. Like Olympic athlete and actor Bruce Jenner and the successful TV/film producer Steve Cannell, Farrell, since childhood, has been a victim of dyslexia, an impairment of the ability to read. He has all but conquered the handicap, but there still are residual effects. "Do you see these three or four silly little lines I'm studying?" he asks me. "You probably could learn them in five minutes. It might take me three times as long."

during the Christmas season, Shea became appalled at the recurring footage of homeless people, which is standard fare for local TV news shows at that time of the year, and he decided on an extraordinary course of action. "Everybody was all incensed about the plight of the Ethiopians," he says, "but here we have two million people in the United States who are homeless, living on the city streets or in public shelters, and depending on handouts for enough food to keep them alive."

Farrell is a rich kid (his father is an executive with W.R. Grace & Co.) and he says, "The easiest thing I could have done would have been to send a check, but I decided to go out and live among these people—posing as one of them—during Hotel's hiatus, so I could determine where the money and my support could be put to the best possible use for the American homeless."

And that's exactly what Farrell did, despite the opinions of his agents and managers that (a) it would be physically dangerous and (b) it might be construed as a publicity stunt.

He began on skid row in Los Angeles, wearing a navy watch cap, filthy clothes and a beard he had grown for the occasion. He smeared his arms and face with dirt. "I overdid it," he says. "I quickly found out that the homeless have great pride and are clean. Nevertheless, I was accepted. I had taken no money with me, and I found out how quickly you can get hungry when you must scrounge for food. I also found out that there are only 10,000 beds in shelters for the 35,000 homeless in Los Angeles. Fortunately, the weather was not bad, and I spent a lot of time sleeping under trees."

In New York and Boston, where it was colder, Farrell slept in such places as the caverns beneath Grand Central Station. He begged on the streets and occasionally spent the night in city-run shelters, one of which, on 168th Street in New York, proved too dangerous for him. Says Farrell, "A social worker, a wonderful black woman, told me, 'Better take care of yourself, darlin'. They'll slice you up the head.' So I stayed only three hours and left. In my naiveté, I thought that the cities and police are hostile to vagrants. Actually, they're quite compassionate. The main thing I found out was that the greatest enemy of the homeless is time. You have to stand in line for hours to get a meal ticket, and then you have to stand in line for hours to get a bed for the night—if you're lucky."

Farrell made friends on the streets among the younger vagrants and even teamed up with one of them to beg on Fifth Avenue. At one point, he became so discouraged that he was strongly tempted to blow his cover. He says, "I knew my father, a devout Catholic, attended Mass every day, and once, I followed him all the way into church. I trailed him to his pew and was just about to tap him on the shoulder when I backed off. I had to stick it out."

From New York and Boston, Farrell went to San Francisco, where the local ABC television station, KGO-TV, knew about his odyssey and arranged with documentary producer Paul Colardo to film Farrell's experiences as a vagrant on the streets of San Francisco. They wired him up with a radio microphone and observed his movements with hidden TV cameras. They caught a sequence in which Farrell attempted to join forces with a group of homeless in a doorway—three men and a woman—and had to escape an attack by the men, who were armed with lead pipes and argued over who was going to kill him. It was the only time he had faced any serious physical danger.

What did he learn from the unique experience? "Current methods of caring for the homeless are inadequate. A national foundation just would not work. It must be a grass-roots movement from city to city. I am putting my money and efforts → into the Home for the Homeless organization in Los Angeles."

And so, we have one Shea Farrell who is totally different from the carefree Shea Farrell of Hotel—who, in turn, is totally different from Shea Farrell, the rich kid, who grew up in Greenwich, Conn., and on Cape Cod with nothing more serious than football and wrestling on his mind.

Born in Cornwall, N.Y., near West Point (his father was an Army lieutenant colonel before retiring to join W.R. Grace), Shea and his three older sisters were reared in luxury in their New England homes. Shea's real name is Edward Leo Farrell III (Shea is a nickname bestowed as an honor to Andy Shea, chairman of Grace Line, Inc.).

Farrell went to five schools, among them prestigious Brunswick and Portsmouth Abbey, none of which discovered his learning problem. "At Brunswick," says Farrell, "they forced me to do everything right-handed, though I am naturally left-handed. It was that kind of school. So my learning disability was chalked up as 'Oh, he's just a lazy lout, an underachiever.' At Rivers Country Day School and Portsmouth Abbey, I was the big athlete—a high-school All-America tackle and nose guard and a very good wrestler. So who cared about my grades? Unfortunately, the colleges did. Football star or not, I wasn't big enough for Notre Dame and not good enough academically to get into any of the Ivy League colleges."

So Farrell ended up at little Lake Forest College in Illinois, where he eschewed football and got hooked on the excellent drama department at the school. It wasn't until his senior year that three psychologists finally solved the problem of why Farrell had such a high IQ yet had to read very slowly in order to absorb the content of what he was reading—even the play scripts he was doing on the stage. Dyslexia, at last, was diagnosed, and he was taught remedial techniques, which he practices to this day.

Coincidental or not, his rise thereafter as an actor was almost meteoric. He studied drama for a while in Chicago after graduating from Lake Forest in 1980, supporting himself as a male model in TV commercials. That winter, his agent flew out to Los Angeles with photos of Farrell and returned with the news that the producers of the soap opera Capitol would like to meet him if he were ever on the West Coast. "It was below zero in Chicago," says Farrell, "so I took the next plane out. I read for the part of Matt McCandless the following afternoon, and with no major acting experience at all, I found myself working as a regular in Capitol."

Farrell played Matt McCandless for seven months and then—almost as easily—he got the role of Mark Danning in Hotel. It was October 1983, and Aaron Spelling was preparing the land-based version of his superhit, The Love Boat. The principal stars were set—James Brolin, Connie Sellecca and Bette Davis, who preceded the late Anne Baxter in the hotel-owner role—but Spelling was casting for what later became known as the puppies. He wanted a coterie of handsome young people to play brief parts, mostly in secondary stories. As one of his colleagues more cynically puts it, "These good-looking young kids would be part of our exquisite set decoration."

Farrell's first tryout was a disaster. "I came into this auditorium on a Friday," he says, "and I was up on the stage trying to react with a lady in the audience who was reading Jim Brolin's part. I was terrible. I heard a voice in the back telling me to read differently, but I couldn't. They said 'Thank you,' and I left. I found out that the voice in the back was Aaron Spelling's, so I told my agent to beg for another reading for me on Monday. I then went out and spent the entire weekend with three expensive drama coaches to help me change the character of Mark Danning as I had read it."

Continues Farrell, "I came back on Monday, and this time the reading was in Spelling's office, which is about the size of a basketball court. I read and went to wait in an anteroom. Spelling's assistant then came out to offer me a personal check from Aaron that would reimburse me for the money I had spent on the coaches. I couldn't accept the check, and I figured I had blown it again, that this was a consolation prize. But a few minutes later, they came out again and told me I had gotten the part."

Farrell lives comfortably in Los Angeles with his wife, Ronda (an ex-model from Shea's Chicago modeling past), with occasional trips to the family home on Cape Cod and to Europe. Ronda has lined up a job in TV news.

On the Hotel set, when he's not painstakingly studying and restudying his lines, Shea bounces around as the largest and most irrepressible of the puppies. He makes improbable baseball and basketball bets with Michael Spound and Nathan Cook, joshes with Heidi Bohay about the clichéd lines in her desk clerk's role.

He exults about being paid while still learning how to act, and tells stories about what he has learned from the guest stars on the show. "I worked with Elizabeth Taylor," he says, "and I was so overwhelmed that I was tied up in knots. Do you know how she loosened me up? With a little off-camera joke. There was a scene where I kept walking down the hotel corridor with her to help her get away from the paparazzi. I was tense, and she felt it. Then she said, 'This scene is easy for me because I've had a lot of experience walking down aisles'." He roars with mirth at the recollection. Nobody else thinks it's that funny.

Farrell's enthusiasm for Hotel work began to wane toward the end of the season. "I just didn't have enough to do, with those three-line scenes, and I felt I still had to learn a lot more about acting," he told me. In March, he asked for and received a release from his contract.

As he had once before, he disappeared into the heartland of America, this time to find out more about himself as well as the plight of the homeless. In May, I caught up with Farrell in Kansas City, where he was starring on the stage in Peter Shaffer's play "Black Comedy." His exuberance had returned. "This is wonderful," he said. "I've worked more in the last eight weeks than I did in the whole three years of Hotel. But I'll be back in television. The scripts are coming in. They even find me here."

Farrell had another reason for exuberance. It was the week of "Hands Across America," and he had remained glued to his TV set the entire Sunday of the spectacle. "Now I know what it's like to be a pioneer," he said. "A year and a half after I first became actively concerned with the poor and homeless, the country has finally gotten off its butt. As we used to say back on Cape Cod, 'It's better than a pointed stick in the eye'." (END)

Moan over Miami Vice and Dismiss The People's Court

Our writer tried to play some board games based on TV shows—and found them far from child's play

By Ralph Schoenstein

"Daddy, I want to go on Wheel of Fortune," said my 9-year-old daughter, Lori, one day last week. "I can fill in the blanks."

"Why, you can play Wheel of Fortune right here," I replied.

And I brought out the Wheel of Fortune game, the Nation's biggest selling board game in 1985: about 1.3 million sets were sold. We Americans are living in a time when our most popular board games are based not on ancient diversions but the current Nielsen reports. Although I haven't yet seen games called Go Guest on Donahue or Film at 11, there are board games based on Miami Vice, The People's Court, The Honeymooners, Dallas, Murder, She Wrote and The New Newlywed Game.

In spite of Lori's request, I decided to pass up Wheel of Fortune, which seemed like an ordinary board game, and explore with her the more imaginative ones. I was unable to conceive how Miami Vice and The People's Court could be turned into spinners, cards and dice.

Well, they couldn't. I have never seen games that so successfully blended confusion and tedium. Miami Vice, for example, was fun as long as you didn't remove the cover. Lori and two of her friends, also girls of 9, kept staring at a picture of the show's two stars and squealing, "They're so cute!" Such mooning made me realize that one of the strengths of Monopoly is its lack of sex; and another is that someone not enrolled in MIT can understand the rules.

Played with 40 tiny plastic cars on a board that was a street map of Miami and Miami Beach, the game called for two players to be the Miami Vice team and the other two to be criminals. The object was to reach the secret drop before the enemy did, either constantly moving one car or a variety of your 10, pausing for confrontations that could redirect you, while also drawing cards that advanced, canceled or obscured all of the above. The game was for players "ages 8 to adult." Neither group included me, but Lori and her two friends, Connie and Laura, qualified, so we were three-fourths valid as we started to play.

We knew how to use our hands to roll the die and move the cars, but still a few questions arose.

"Do both cops try to block both criminals?" Connie asked.

"I think it's optional," I told her.

Also optional was making sense of the rules. I kept trying to both read and play, but I was managing to do neither.

"Am I supposed to use all my men up?" asked Lori as I rolled a 5 and moved one of my cars toward Key Biscayne. I had no idea why I was going toward Key Biscayne. I really wanted to go to Palm Beach and play crazy eights. I yearned for a game that was based not on a hit show but comprehensible fun.

"Am I supposed to guess where both your drops are?" asked Laura as she halfheartedly moved her car toward Coral Gables. "I don't know if I should try to get to the drop or try to stop your cars."

"I don't understand about being a decoy," Connie said.

"I want to go to Boardwalk," said Lori.

"I think you're supposed to spin the confrontation wheel now," Laura told Connie.

"Why?" Connie replied.

"Because I just landed on you."

"That's not me. I'm here on Arthur Godfrey Road."

"Girls," I said, "maybe it's just too hard to play a game with the streets of Miami. Maybe we should start with Scarsdale."

"Let's play People's Court!" Lori said.

"Good idea," I said. "I'd like to bring a class-action suit against the makers of Miami Vice."

The People's Court, however, made Miami Vice look like tick-tack-toe. While the girls wondered which of them could be the judge and pound on things, I began reading rules that seemed like a guide to the Law School Admission Test. The object of the game was to be the first of the plaintiffs to fill your clipboard by collecting one of each category of CASE cards from the board; but before starting to play, you had to make an English translation of seven rules under the heading PREPARATION; rules like, "If a player rolls a 5 or 6 or draws a CASE DISMISSED card he does not get a CASE card." The only rule I completely understood was No. 7, which said, "Read the rest of the rules."

For understanding the next set of rules, it helped if one of the children was a lawyer. I missed the simple clarity of Form 1040 as I read, "To play on the SHODDY GOODS track, a player places two SHODDY GOODS cards, or a SHODDY GOODS card and a WILD CARD, faceup on the table, . . . rolls the dice and moves his token the number rolled. . . . Any player with one or more TELL IT TO THE JUDGE cards must spin and follow instructions. . . . ALL playing cards, including 'Open Cases,' are collected and reshuffled."

"I don't understand this," said Lori.

"You're not supposed to," I replied. "That's why so many lawyers have work."

It was Laura's turn to spin, but when she did, the plastic arrow of the spinner flew right off the wheel. I put the arrow back in its hole, finding no way to fasten it there, and Laura spun again. And again the arrow took flight, luckily causing no tort.

"You're already ahead on the Shoddy Goods track," I told her. "And if you call David Horowitz with the name of the company that made this game, you win."

Moments later, the girls and I walked out of The People's Court and into a lively game of Go Fish. I believe it was based on a Jacques Cousteau special. END

The Facts of Life

It's Been TV's Little Show That Could

A look at why this modest underdog of a sitcom has become the longest-running prime-time series on NBC today

By Kenneth Turan

The fact that The Facts of Life is still alive would seem to contradict any number of facts of network-TV life. Here is a show with no single big star, a show without a lone guiding creative force, such as Garry Marshall or Norman Lear, a show that spent two seasons in a "we-who-are-about-to-die-salute-you" suicide slot opposite top-rated Dynasty. Yet not only did Facts survive, the darn thing prospered. Now going into its seventh full season, it's the longest-running prime-time series on NBC's schedule. As Charlotte Rae, who plays the show's beneficent materfamilias, Mrs. Garrett, puts it, "It's gone on and on and on, and the ratings have gone up and up and up."

Facts' success has been so unexpected that the solons of Hollywood are still taken aback by it. "Now that we've switched nights away from Dynasty," says John Bowab, who's directed more than 60 episodes, "my friends watch it and tell me, 'You know, the thing is funny.' Well, no kidding, Dick Tracy." Facts has in fact been among NBC's top-ranked comedies for the past five seasons. It finished 23rd overall for the 1985-86 season, handily winning its time slot against its most frequent competitors, Airwolf and Benson. Still, adds Lisa Whelchel, who plays the beauteous Blair, "Nobody has any idea how long we've been on; they think we're still a bunch of little girls running around. We're easily overlooked because we've never been a huge hit; we just sort of snuck in there."

Facts' durability is especially boggling given the shaky nature of its origins. When those involved talk about the early days, words like "nightmare" creep into the conversation. "It was very shaky," remembers Jack Elinson, who has been the show's executive producer off and on since 1980. "No one even dreamed of being picked up for another season."

As is often the case with television, those most responsible for getting Facts going are not mentioned in the show's credits. It started, remembers Al Burton, then director of development for T.A.T. Communications (now Embassy Television), with not one but two and eventually three ideas from the fertile mind of Fred Silverman, then president of NBC. "First Fred and [then NBC program vice-president] Brandon Tartikoff talked about doing a 'Kotter Girls' kind of show similar to John Travolta's Welcome Back, Kotter. Next Fred called and said he really liked Charlotte Rae, the housekeeper on Diff'rent Strokes, and how about spinning her off into the thing as well. So we conjured up this idea of the private girls' school, but Charlotte did not want to leave a show that was already working. We had to promise her a safe passage back to Diff'rent Strokes if this didn't work."

"Didn't work" seemed like a mild way to assess the show's progress at first. Featuring seven girls and Charlotte Rae, Facts suffered through an unexciting pilot episode, an initial order of four shows that didn't thrill many people, and then a second order of nine more that were not much of an improvement. Which brings up a key reason for the show's success: both NBC and the producers, each for their own reasons, refused to give up on it. For the production company, it was a matter of corporate philosophy: "We've got a very good track record for keeping shows on," says Embassy president Glenn Padnick firmly, pointing to long runs for The Jeffersons and Strokes in addition to Facts. As for NBC, it was more a question of necessity. "Back in those days, NBC was the bottom of the barrel," remembers Elinson. "If a show like [Facts] came along now, they wouldn't be as patient."

It was at this time, right before the fall 1980 season and right after NBC and T.A.T. jointly decided to eliminate four → of the original seven girls (including Molly Ringwald, now a big deal in theatrical films) to ease an acting logjam, that Fred Silverman's third idea kicked in. "A picture came out called 'Little Darlings,' with Tatum O'Neal and Kristy McNichol as a rich kid and a street tough who end up at summer camp together," recalls Elinson. "Silverman said to himself, 'Let's bring in a streetwise girl to contrast with Blair'." Nancy McKeon got the job of creating feisty Jo, and, in an every-cloud-has-a-silver-lining bonus, the Screen Actors Guild went on strike before the season began. "We kept the writers on salary," says Embassy's Padnick. "They had lots and lots of time to craft the first shows, which led to an unusually well-written set of scripts," which in turn got the new four-girl structure off to an exceptionally strong start.

Right from the outset, an attempt was made to give Facts a quality that set it apart from other teen shows and helped keep it alive. "We said, 'Let's make believe they're women, have them say bright things and not be the Gidget kind of squealing beach-party bimbo teen-ager'," remembers Elinson. Adds Burton, "Many times I'd be talking to the writers, and I'd say, 'They may be 15, but write them as 25.' That doesn't mean precocious; there were no hot lines. What you hear now about The Cosby Show being reality-based, Facts was that way when gimmicks and 'high concept' were going strong."

Though the basic format of The Facts of Life has not budged since those beginnings, a major factor in the show's longevity has been its ability to change in ways both large and small. For instance, though Mrs. Garrett's character has remained constant as, in director Bowab's words, "Mother Earth with a sense of humor," her specific occupation has mutated from housemother to dietitian to owner of Edna's Edibles and the current gift shop Over Our Heads. More important, the girls themselves have been allowed to grow, to leave high school and move on to college and the real world, an uncommon (for television) decision, which is credited to former executive producers Linda Marsh and Margie Peters, who felt uncomfortable with, in Marsh's words, "the tendency when young people are working on a show to keep them young forever, to feed them the opposite of steroids." Explains Glenn Padnick, "We thought we were doing a show about a girls' school when really it was about those girls, period. We probably saw them in the classroom twice in four years. Linda and Margie realized we weren't seeing the forest for the trees."

When analyzing Facts' durability, however, one elusive yet essential factor towers over the rest, and that is the chemistry between the young women involved. For one thing, says Nancy McKeon, "These are four very distinct characters. Everyone in the audience has someone to identify with." And for another, the actresses have had their roles for so many years they know these alter egos inside out. "You can ask me anything out of the blue about Blair and I know what she'd say," says Lisa Whelchel, who points to the fuss she raised when the show's writers "wanted Blair to consummate her relationship with her boy friend. A lot of girls look up to us. They feel, 'If Blair says it's OK, it's OK.' I didn't want that responsibility." After some discussion, Whelchel won her point.

Part of that chemistry between Whelchel, McKeon, Kim Fields (who plays Tootie) and Mindy Cohn (Natalie) was built in: "I don't think you can create something like that; it has to be there initially," says Frances McConnell, Embassy's senior vice-president for current programs. Part of the chemistry also comes from a kind of luck of the career draw in that no one person burst into stardom at the expense of the others (as Travolta did on Kotter), meaning that ego conflicts have never raised their ugly heads. "Star temperament? I'm still waiting for it, and so are the tabloids," says Mindy Cohn. "All those nit-picky things, crud about dressing rooms and money, they don't even enter into this cast." Cracks George Clooney (who, along with Mackenzie Astin, provides the male presence for the show), "They don't have any problems about who's got the biggest dressing room because I've got it. And I get paid the most money; they handle that very well also."

Opposite page: In an '82 episode, the girls painted everything but the walls. Above: the following season, Jo and Blair graduated from the Eastland School for Girls.

More than just the number of years spent together, there is the factor of when those years were. "We went through puberty on camera," admits Nancy McKeon with a comic wince. "We can pull out those old tapes and groan, 'Oh, no.' The audience saw us go through our ugliest times and come out all right." Sharing that experience not only brought the girls closer as performers and people ("We're more like sisters than friends," says Cohn), it bonded them to their public as well, creating a sense of intertwined relationships that brings an audience back for more and more.

The Facts of Life started out as a "problem" show, dealing with the obvious difficulties of teen life, everything from gender confusion to cocaine, the latter being an episode that resisted an easy answer by having the boy give up Blair instead of the drug. But now that facet of the show seems to be fading. Granted, one of its virtues was that it never pounded the problems in with a sledgehammer: "It doesn't make anybody work too hard, you learn a little something through the back door," drawls Lisa Whelchel. But now, Kim Fields notes, "The audience cares about us, we're family to them, they want to know what's going to happen to us next." Sums up Mindy Cohn, "People believe they need a fix on these girls," and if that's not a formula for longevity, it'll have to do until one comes along.

How strong that formula is will be tested next season, when Charlotte Rae will severely curtail her time on the show to concentrate on other acting projects. The four other principals all say they want to come back as long as they're wanted. Perhaps, as former executive producer Linda Marsh slyly put it, "They'll end up being 'The Golden Girls'." Given the unlikely nature of what's gone on so far, that might not be surprising. (END)

Southern Hospitality? Try the 10 Sets on at Shine Morgan's with His Son Ed Switchin' the Channels

Here's life at the hub of TV and talk in Oxford, Mississippi

By Willie Morris

Oxford is a languid old town of 10,000 souls in the rolling hills of northeast Mississippi. With an affecting poignance the early settlers named it Oxford to try to get the new but unlocated state university, which they did in 1844 by a one-vote margin in the legislature. It is a courthouse-square town, and the Confederate soldier gazes from his pedestal near the shady greensward down South Lamar Boulevard.

The county is about one-third black, and old white and black men sit together on the benches around the courthouse whittling wood and chewing tobacco and watching the cars pass by. Only a few blocks down University Avenue is the University of Mississippi—"Ole Miss"—whose student population is also about 10,000. Merle Worth, the New York television producer who was down here recently shooting for Hal Holbrook's Portrait of America on the Turner network, observed that she had never experienced a place that was such a wholesome blend of young and old people and where the storytelling tradition still so generously abounds.

One of the founts of that tradition, upon which arcane and flamboyant television-watching habits have been superimposed, is an unprepossessing establishment across from the courthouse, Shine Morgan's Furniture Store. Shine Morgan, dead 15 years, ran north Mississippi politically from his store and was a raconteur of considerable and ornate renown.

His son, Ed Morgan, now runs the establishment—more accurately, the institution—which has been in the same building for almost four decades. Ed is 53 and has inherited his father's perfervid rhetoric. He may likewise be the ranking expert on television in the southern United States.

This is in great measure true because he watches TV all day, or at least in the business lulls, from any one of a significant number of easy chairs or sofas he sells. These are arranged in front of a long bank of television sets of all sizes and descriptions. Occasionally he will have eight or 10 sets on at once, tuned to different channels, but more often than not he will be watching only one, assisted by his ubiquitous channel-changer. One of the many denizens of the store says: "He can watch more TV in five minutes than anybody else in this town in three hours." This garrulous observer adds: "He watches ever-thing, you name it. He knows more about TV than that fellow Nelson, or Nielsen." Let it be said that Ed Morgan conducts a brisk small-town entrepreneurship, but in the long interludes of silence and ennui, TV and the talk will seize the day. He is both synonymous with television and independent of its emphatic dominations. In our day this is a distinctive combination.

It is a most eclectic store. In addition to the television sets and the sofas and easy chairs, there are the stoves, washers and refrigerators on the bare wooden floor in the back, videodiscs on tall racks and photographs of politicians of a generation or more ago on the various walls. A painting of Shine Morgan looks benignly down on the television-watching and the ineluctable swapping of stories. Courthouse-square merchants have been known to drift in on their way home after the day's work for the Ole Miss Rebels sports talk and to watch the nightly national news, then to retire behind the stoves and washers for a surreptitious vodka or two. "Their wives can't smell it on their breaths," someone says.

As the square's daytime hostelry, Shine Morgan's is host to a steady stream of people coming in to see what Ed Morgan might be watching on TV. These curious interlopers will include a vivid cross section of the vicinity: bankers, druggists, soybean farmers, tire salesmen, football coaches, law-school deans, history professors.Federal judges, legal secretaries, a perambulating bum or two and certified public accountants.

One of the more notable habitués is Silas Gault, who tends the store when Ed Morgan has to go to the bank or the bathroom. Silas is retired from the postal service. He is a beloved figure here who "flew the Hump" as a teen-age aircraft mechanic in World War II. He raises his own turnip greens and once was the armed night watchman at the experimental marijuana field out from town. He did not like this sinecure, however. "All you can do is listen to the radio out there," he told Ed Morgan. "It's dark and lonesome. You've got to keep your eye on the marijuana field. There's no TV out there."

When he is not at the bus station seeing who is dropping off in town, or in the courtroom sessions on Tuesdays, Silas Gault can frequently be sighted from outside the front plate-glass windows of → the store sitting next to the proprietor, watching television. When Ed Morgan and Silas watch The People's Court and Silas admires a particular defendant, Morgan will say: "I think that S.O.B. is guilty as hell." If Silas develops an antipathy for some transparent transgressor, Morgan will observe: "Look at him. He's innocent as a babe in arms." Silas's favorite television figure is sports commentator Lindsey Nelson, whom he once drove through the boondocks countryside around Toccopola and showed him an old house where a man and wife had had six sets of twins. When Jeopardy! comes on, Silas and Ed and the others will mill about the television set shouting taunts and challenges. One can hear them from a substantial distance.

Ed Morgan's son John, an Ole Miss graduate student who can recite the whole first page of "The Great Gatsby" and often does so, says the important thing to know about his father is that he never watches commercials. "He thinks commercials are bad. Other than that," young John says, "he likes about everything. On Sundays he likes the painter on PBS who always uses what he calls his 'mighty brush.' Daddy knows the name of every single brush. He loves the old Honeymooners—also The Beverly Hillbillies. And, of course, the movies. He adores Woody Allen; his favorite is the one about Zelig, the human chameleon."

On an afternoon of threatening Dixie snow I walked into the store to be greeted by a striking tableau. Several of the regulars were trying to reenact the moment on the Tonight show the previous night when an expert with the slingshot got Carson to hold up a small carrot so he could shoot it in two from across the studio. "Ol' Johnny looked worried," someone reported. They talked about Johnny as if he were an essential participant in their own especial coterie. "Ol' Johnny went to Millsaps down in Jackson, Mississippi, for a while, you know," another explained, and that took care of that.

On another occasion, when Ed Morgan was out delivering a television, I walked in to this dialogue:

"Bill Moyers is the best on TV."

"Hell, no. Charles Kuralt is. He understands human interest."

"Moyers is the smartest man on TV."

"Kuralt."

"Moyers."

"Kuralt, by damned."

My friend Ed Morgan is an affectionate man of both serene and exotic disposition. He is self-deprecatory. When he was a child he injured his eye, so that after a bourbon or two or when he is tired his eyelid droops. "Look at this," he said one day. It was the photograph on his new driver's license. The eyelid was drooping. "I just showed it to my momma, and it made her cry."

Doyle Jones, an elderly black man, has been with Ed for years. Many of the whites have trouble pronouncing Doyle. They call him "Doll." Often Doyle Jones will sit in an easy chair observing the TV-watching with a bemused and patient eye.

Lonnie Louis Smith, an RCA-television salesman who works for a big distributor in Memphis, provides a more sweeping perspective on Ed Morgan, national in its scope. He has been calling on Shine Morgan's Furniture Store for 12 years. "Ed was one of the best remote-control dealers in the South back early on," he contends. "This was the 1970s. He'd simply sit in the chair and use the channel-changer all the time and people would come into the store and watch him and buy the remotes." The perspicacious salesman continues: "An unusually large percentage of his business is remotes. He sets an example. Just today he ordered 20 TVs, and 12 were remotes.

One of Ed's memorable complaints came from a country customer who bought a used black-and-white and returned it three days later. "It plays good," the man said, "but it won't say nuthin'."

"I'll tell you this, by God. In all of the United States there's no single person who uses a channel-changer more than Ed Morgan. He carries it around all day in his hand. You'll have to believe me: he uses the channel-changer more than any other man in the Nation." At home at night, it is told, his beautiful brunette wife, Linda, will not watch television with him because of the way he changes channels. She makes him go into the bedroom.

By his own count Ed has watched the movie "Red River" when it came on TV at least 20 times. He can quote much of the dialogue verbatim and claims he finds something new every time. When his children or friends see "Red River" in the day's TV schedule, they will telephone him and say, "It's on again."

But there is forever the regional talk, the stories, the reminiscences of people long dead in a settled place, which rival the omniscient television, challenging it, putting it in strange yet civilized focus.

Shine Morgan himself, a mythic figure, is likewise frequently evoked. As the TVs blast in the background, the stories of him are a bottomless source of repartee. Here, for instance, are Shine and his friend Doc Roberts fishing at Lake Sardis on a lethargic summer's afternoon many years ago. Shine feels something heavy on his line and pulls it in. He looks down.

"My God, it's a human!" he exclaims, and lets the enigmatic form sink and disappear.

"That wasn't a human," Doc Roberts replies. "That was a beaver."

"Does a beaver look at you and part his hair?" Shine asks.

Right after the war, 1947, a good part of the rural county got electricity for the first time. Before then the refrigerators were operated by kerosene. A man from the county came into town to buy an electric refrigerator.

"Will this refrigerator freeze?" he asked Shine Morgan.

"Will it freeze?" Shine said. "Don't let your dogs and chickens get under the house just under where the refrigerator is. They'll freeze."

The man bought the refrigerator. He telephoned two days later. "Shine, you got to get me another refrigerator."

"What's wrong with the one you got?" Shine asked.

"What's wrong? I can't stop it from makin' ice. I cut it as low as it'll go but I can't stop the son of a bitch. I been up all night gettin' the ice out. There's ice on the kitchen floor. There's so much ice in the sink my wife can't wash the damned dishes."

In an establishment where TV sets are the staple, there have been other, more peculiar hazards. One of Ed Morgan's most loyal customers was an old black lady named Sila Mayes, who recently died. "She bought everything from me," Ed says, "refrigerators, stoves, TVs, everything I had. She believed in me." Once a week, regular as a metronome, she would come in and pay $10 on the installments.

On one such afternoon Ed was alone in the store. Silas was at the bus station. Doyle was down in the Bargain Basement. On the television Ed was watching "The Blue Lagoon" on HBO, an R-rated movie with Brooke Shields, who was marooned with a young man on an island. Ed went to the back of the store to answer the telephone. He carried the channel-changer with him. He forgot about the movie. Sila Mayes came in to pay her $10. She paused before the television. Brooke Shields and her companion were lying naked on the beach kissing. Sila Mayes pounded her walking cane on the floor. "Stop it!" she shouted at the nude figures on the screen. "Stop this right now!"

From the back Ed was horrified. He put down the telephone, rushed to the front and swiftly changed channels. "Sila," he said, "these damned soap operas are bad these days."

One of Ed's memorable complaints came from a country customer who bought a used black-and-white and returned it three days later. "It plays good," the man said, "but it won't say nuthin'."

The large TV consoles were a substantial part of his business in a small Southern town in the '60s and '70s. But when people started getting more than one or two sets, the 26-inch and 27- →

inch portable table models began to flourish. "Sound is coming back in, too. But there's still a market for consoles. There are holes in dens all over Oxford that I measure for consoles." But the VCR revolution is here to stay. "I sell a lot of VCRs. They're kind of like a fifth of whiskey. Everybody looks around for the best price. Years ago people would buy TVs and get us to deliver them on Christmas Eve, a family thing, under the tree. Now it's all year long, VCRs and everything."

Living as they do in a college town, Ed Morgan surmises, people in Oxford watch more public television. Public television is more unhurried and dignified, he thinks. There's a shape and beauty to it for him. "It's just damned good. Sure, I'll watch anything, but the public TV is the best. I feel guilty when I don't send in a pledge." The cable and the independent stations also have had an enormous impact on the town, much more than he thought they would at first. Even in a small town like this one, there are 15 or 20 channels to choose from.

My own feelings about television are at best ambivalent, and even as intimate an authority as Ed Morgan has his brooding doubts. "It's all in the ratings game. And there are far too many commercials. That's what's good about a VCR. You can run 'em out. And that's why I take the channel-changer around with me." As for MTV, with teen-age children it is on 40 per cent of the time in his home. "I keep MTV off the changer in my store. I guess I'm an old fogy. But I can't understand these kids with no clothes on jumping all over the place. I wish they'd put on Glenn Miller and Stan Kenton."

In prime time, our home expert watches ABC, CBS and NBC all at once, switching constantly back and forth. He is partial these days to Miami Vice. He likes the music, and the star Don Johnson was born in Mississippi, he says. [Actually, he was born in Flatt Creek, Mo.—Eds.] The first 10 minutes of a national nightly newscast, he believes, give him what he wants. He prefers Tom Brokaw and NBC. He admires the Cable News Network. "No doubt news made early TV, and CNN is fast-breaking. They'll be there when something happens. CNN is the upcoming thing."

60 Minutes remains special to him. He was gratified when he heard CBS would postpone the show until after the Super Bowl. He likes the controversial aspect, and his coffee crowd, who meet every morning in a cafe just off the square called Smitty's, will always bring up something that was on 60 Minutes the day before. "Those guys dig up things. I'd hate to see them come to Oxford. We're vulnerable too." He likes Carson and considers Letterman a genius. He tapes Letterman on Thursday nights so he can watch all over again the description of the mail he gets. "And of course you start the morning with Jane Pauley. I read the paper and watch at the same time. You've got the most beautiful women on the early morning news."

He says, a trifle wistfully: "Come to think of it, I think there's almost too much to watch nowadays. People aren't nearly as critical as they should be, I guess. They aren't as sophisticated about TV as they used to be back when there were only three networks and the public one."

And TV and his native region? "National television treats the South more fairly than it used to," he judges, "because we're a lot better than we used to be. There were a lot of bad things in the South then, especially growing up in a little town in Mississippi. I'm glad there weren't more TV cameras covering the South then. TV's educated people to the outside world."

It is apparent that our indigenous maestro does not apply the methodology of science to assess the modern wizardry of television, and surely that is as it should be. If readers of TV Guide in, say, Cicero, Illinois, or Hamilton, Ohio, ever find themselves on the courthouse square in Oxford, Mississippi, the erstwhile proprietor of Shine Morgan's Furniture Store graciously invites them to join him, Silas, Doyle and the others for The People's Court, Jeopardy!, and, of course, "Red River," if it is on that day.
